Mock Election 2016 Predicts Future President

Politics

On Tuesday, 8 November, Fleetwood Area High School conducted its 2016 presidential mock election. This mock election was conducted by the Tiger TV Media students and received a lot of help from an assortment of other departments, including the social studies department and the head of the library, Mr. Kirby Barnett.

Students and their classes represented different states in the electoral college. Students reported to the library with their social studies classrooms and voted. They first had to register using their student ID. Then they moved to another computer to cast their votes.

The final results for the Presidential race were 407 electoral votes for Donald Trump and 131 for Hillary Clinton. None of the electoral votes were won by a third party candidate.

In the U.S. Senate race, Senator Pat Toomey beat out Senator Katie McGinty 455 to 252. And for the U.S. House race, Costello garnered 432 votes while Parrish only received 280.

The event gave students new insight on how voting actually works. Many high schoolers do not even know what a real ballot looks like. Thanks to Mr. Barnett, the online ballot resembled one that is found at a voting booth.

The TV media students created a live stream that was available to everyone in the school. During the livestream, reporters interviewed students as they exited the library, asking them questions that were based on exit polls conducted by several social studies classes.

Tiger TV also had panel discussions about the hottest issues discussed during this election. Topics included civil rights, the Second Amendment, police brutality, and the economy. Some of the students who were part of the panel discussions were Ripley Price, Jon Sanchez, Alyssa Hall, and Shane Burt. During each discussion, each student was either on the Donald Trump or Hillary Clinton side, and he or she argued his or her respective viewpoints.

There were also exit pollers that were scattered around the library asking the students their specific opinions on several subjects discussed by the panel. Many of the students enjoyed the experience and thought that it was beneficial for them.

"I think that this is a good experience to teach us as high schoolers how real voting works and what a real ballot looks like. I enjoyed the experience," senior Marckens Griffon said.

Cubs Claim Long-Awaited World Series Title.

Sports

No matter the outcome of the 2016 World Series, it was sure to be historic. The combatants, the National League Champion Chicago Cubs and the American League Champion Cleveland Indians, had gone a combined 172 years without winning a World Series. The Cubs had last won in 1908, and the Indians had last won in 1948. On top of that, Chicago had not reached the World Series at all since 1945. After years of waiting, one of these teams would finally end years of disappointment. The Indians were also looking to bring another championship to the city of Cleveland after the Cavaliers captured the NBA championship in June.

Game one featured a marquee pitching matchup featuring former American League Cy Young winner Cory Kluber for Cleveland and Cubs veteran ace Jon Lester. Both are finalists for their respective leagues' Cy Young awards this year. Kluber dominated at the outset, striking out eight of the first nine batters. The Indians scored twice in the first, and added another on a home run by Roberto Perez in the third. Kluber continued to dominate with the lead, pitching six shutout innings. American League Championship Series MVP Andrew Miller came on to pitch the seventh. Miller had dominated through the first two rounds of the playoffs but struggled at the outset. He loaded the bases, bringing the go ahead run to the plate but struck out Cubs catcher David Ross to end the threat and preserve the lead. In the bottom of the eighth, Perez came to bat again and delivered a 3-run homer for his second of the game to extend the Tribe's lead to 6-0, which they would not relinquish in taking a 1-0 series lead.

In game two, it was Chicago's Jake Arrieta, another former Cy Young winner, who had the upper hand. Despite early control issues, he took a no hitter into the sixth inning. He was aided by an Anthony Rizzo RBI double in the first inning and two RBI singles by the comeback kid Kyle Schwarber. Schwarber played just five regular season games in April before an outfield collision left him with multiple ligament tears in his knee. He was somehow able to recover in time to play in the World Series. The Cubs lead totaled five runs after four innings of play. In the bottom of the sixth, Arrieta lost his no hitter on a Jason Kipnis double. Kipnis would later score, giving the Indians their first run and spelling the end of the night for Arrieta. Mike Montgomery was brought in and ended the inning without further trouble. From that point on, both bullpens kept zeroes on the board, as the Cubs walked away with a 5-1 win and the series even at one game apiece.

When the series moved to Chicago for game three, 102-year-old Wrigley Field would host its first World Series game in 71 years. This game featured a pitcher's duel between Kyle Hendricks, the NL ERA leader and a finalist for the Cy Young award, as well as Josh Tomlin, who was on a hot streak and was the center of one of the more heartwarming stories of the postseason. His father had been paralyzed from the waist down in August, and when an anonymous fan heard about this, he paid for him and Tomlin's mother to be flown to Chicago to watch their son pitch. He did not disappoint. Tomlin tossed almost five scoreless innings before being lifted early. In the top of the fifth, the usually steady Hendricks was shaken. He allowed the Indians to load the bases with one out before Cubs manager Joe Maddon made the bold move to lift one of the league's best pitchers. Justin Grimm came in from the bullpen and promptly made Maddon look like a genius. He allowed his first batter, star shortstop Francisco Lindor, to hit into an inning ending double play to keep the game tied at zero. That would change in the seventh. With Tyler Naquin on base, Coco Crisp pinch hit, delivering an RBI single for what turned out to be the game's only run. Cleveland would hold on and claim a 2-1 series lead with the 1-0 win.

Cubs Win World Series

The Cubs would strike first in game four, when Anthony Rizzo followed Dexter Fowler's leadoff double with a knock of his own to score Fowler and give the Cubs a first inning lead. The very next inning, Cleveland's Carlos Santana responded by rocking a solo homer to tie the game. With two outs, Lonnie Chisenhall reached on an error, the pitcher Kluber reached on an infield single, and an error on the play allowed Chisenhall to score and the Indians to take the lead. Francisco Lindor added another for Cleveland in the third, and Kluber continued to pitch as well as he had all postseason, lowering his playoff ERA to 0.89 while pitching six innings and giving up just one run. With the score at 4-1 in the seventh, Jason Kipnis, who grew up a Cubs fan living near Chicago, hit a three-run home run to extend the Tribe's lead to 7-1. The Indians would win, 7-2, and take a commanding 3-1 series lead.

The potential for an Indians clinch loomed over game five, and Jose Ramirez aided the cause early with a second inning home run. Cleveland's enigmatic righthander Trevor Bauer was able to hold serve early on but ran into trouble in the fourth. Chicago's NL MVP candidate Kris Bryant started the scoring with a solo homerun to tie the game, and was followed by hits from Rizzo, Ben Zobrist, Addison Russell, and Javier Baez, and a sacrifice fly by Ross to give the Cubs a 3-1 lead. The Tribe earned one back in the sixth, but could muster no more. They did threaten in the seventh, but Maddon called on his flame-throwing closer Aroldis Chapman to stop it. He did so, and finished the game for an eight-out save and a 3-2 win as the series returned to Cleveland for game six.

Despite the Cubs' game five win, they still had their backs against the wall in game six. However, they came out swinging in the first, as Bryant homered again and Zobrist and Russell contributed RBI doubles to give the Cubs a 3-0 lead before Cleveland had a chance to swing the bats. Josh Tomlin, who started for the Indians, struggled again in the third, loading the bases for giving way to Dan Otero. Otero faced Russell, who promptly launched a grand slam for a 7-0 Cubs lead. Despite giving up two runs, Arrieta pitched more than well enough for his second win of the series, and Chicago won, 9-3, to force a winner take all game seven.

Game sevens, by nature, are exciting. The circumstances surrounding this particular game seven made it even more intriguing. However, what transpired at Progressive Field in Cleveland in the late night and early morning of 2-3 November turned this game into an instant classic. The action started immediately, as the Cubs' Dexter Fowler led off the game with a home run to give Chicago the lead. However, the Indians struck back in the third, when Santana singled in Coco Crisp to tie it. The Tribe continued to push the envelope against Cubs' starter Hendricks but stranded two runners on base to keep the game tied. Chicago responded quickly against Corey Kluber, taking advantage of Indian's defensive miscues to set up a sacrifice fly by Addison Russell and an RBI double by Willson Contreras to make it 3-1. The Cubs made it 5-1 in the fifth on the strength of Javier Baez's home run and Anthony Rizzo's RBI double. The back-and-forth scoring continued in the bottom of the fifth, when, with two outs, Lonnie Chisenhall walked and Jason Kipnis reached on an error, and both scored on a wild pitch to make it 5-3. Cubs catcher David Ross responded in the sixth, smashing a solo home run in his final major league game before retirement. The game then calmed for the time being, until Aroldis Chapman was brought in with a runner on base and two outs in the eighth. Brandon Guyer greeted Chapman with a double to pull Cleveland within two. Next up was Rajai Davis, who delivered a moment Indians fans will not soon forget, lining a Chapman pitch over the wall in left to tie the game at six all. The game would stay tied through the end of the ninth, sending the game into extra innings. However, the game was halted by a seventeen-minute rain delay, further heightening the tension as both teams waited to retake the field. As soon as they did in the top of the tenth, the Cubs started a rally off Bryan Shaw, and then Ben Zobrist gave the Cubs the lead with an RBI double that will go down in Chicago Cubs lore. Miguel Montero added another with an RBI single before Trevor Bauer came on to work out the jam. Rookie Carl Edwards was brought in to pitch the bottom of the tenth, but allowed one runner to reach with two outs before Davis came up again and delivered an RBI single to pull Cleveland within one. The struggling Edwards was replaced by Mike Montgomery, who got Michael Martinez to ground out, ending the game and clinching the Cubs' first World Series since 1908.

Ben Zobrist was named Series MVP after hitting .357 and driving in the crucial go ahead run in Game seven.

Students Of The Month Named for September

School

The position of student of the month is something many upperclassmen seek during their high school careers. Not only do these students have their photos posted in the front of the building, but these students also receive a parking spot in the front of the lot for the month. Samantha Evans is a senior at Fleetwood and has earned this title alongside one of her fellow classmates.

Evans is a well-rounded student and an incredible leader to her classmates, so it is easy to see why she was presented with this honor. Along with sitting in the top five students in her class, Samantha is involved in multiple clubs, organizations, and honor societies. Evans is the president of Student Council and a member of FBLA, Relay 4 Life, vocal ensemble, women's chorus, choraliars, theatre society, NHS, and Quill and Scroll. She also plays alto sax in the marching and concert band.

Her heavy involvement in the school makes her an excellent student to represent the school as student of the month.

John Alexander Kopp, better known to his classmates as Alex, has also been awarded the honor of student of the month.

His classmates recognize him for his sharp sense of humor and strong opinions. Aside from being a well-liked senior, Kopp has been an outstanding member of Student Council for the past four years. He currently holds the position of treasurer and works hard to keep our student body involved in schoolwide events and activities.

Alex also is a distinguished member of the high school yearbook staff, which spends months out of the year working to provide yearbooks to the student body.

His determined attitude makes him a wonderful fit for the position of student of the month.

Toomey Retains US Senate Seat

Politics

The 2016 United States Senate race in Pennsylvania was contested by Republican incumbent Pat Toomey and Democrat challenger--and former Chief of Staff to Gov. Tom Wolf--Katie McGinty. Toomey won with 2,830,353 votes for 48.9%.

McGinty received 2,734,454 votes for just 47.2%, despite winning many pre-election polls. Libertarian candidate Edward Clifford received 226,272 votes for 3.9%.

Toomey received 53% of the vote in Berks County, a total of 91,935 votes, compared to 43% and 74,083 for McGinty. Toomey won the popular vote in 60 of Pennsylvania's 67 counties.

"I'm not really surprised Toomey won," AP Government teacher Mr. Edward Carr said.

The race was particularly important because of Pennsylvania's status as a political battleground state. The outcome of the election would contribute heavily to party control in the Senate. Republicans retained control, 51-47, with two seats remaining undecided.

"I noticed that it was part of a Conservative shift across the board, at least at the federal level. And I'm most interested to see how a Republican House, Senate, and President will get along dealing with policy issues," Carr said.

The other of Pennsylvania's Senate seats belongs to Democrat Bob Casey, who began serving his first term in 2013.

Fleetwood Student Council Attends 80th Annual PASC Student Conference

Every year, a Pennsylvania high school hosts the State Conference for Student Councils across the state. For the past several years, Fleetwood's Council has been fortunate enough to attend.

This year's state conference was hosted by Deer Lakes High School. Deer Lakes' students spent nearly two years working in preparation to host over 1,000 students. The students present spent the weekend playing games, listening to speakers, attending workshops, feasting on banquets, and partaking of dances.

A crowd favorite was speaker Cara Filler, who shared the story of her personal tragedy to teach students about decision-making.

Accompanied by advisors Ms. Susan Nagle and Mrs. Dina Heffner, fifteen FAHS students were able to join in on the fun.

Fleetwood's council was awarded the Distinguished Keystone Council Award, and underclassman Andrew Menet was given the Dale Hawley Award. This was the second year that the Fleetwood Council was recognized, and Menet was one of few students in the state given this honor.

District 13, to which the Fleetwood Student Council belongs, had the most Student Council's recognized at the state level.

"The trip was very educational and we were all very grateful to have gotten to participate. We as a council are very proud of our accomplishments, and we are very proud of Andrew," Student Council Secretary Emma Davies said.

The conference came to a close after PASC State President, Tyler Raub, closed the time capsule that is set to be opened twenty years from now at the 100th annual PASC State conference.

Kutztown vs. Fleetwood Football Game a Hard Loss

Sports

The Fleetwood football team suffered a sad defeat to Kutztown Area High School. Many of the players were disappointed in the outcome of the game. All of the fans thought this game was a sure win for the team.

"I feel like we had a slow start but came back in the second half. If we had a full roster, it would have been a different outcome. Respect where respect is due though--Kutztown has become a better team than in past years. Although my last game was not a win, I'm going to cherish my memories and experiences from playing with this team," senior Ty Galtere said.

The football team finished 1-9. All their games were very close. The Kutztown score was just separated by one point: a very close game, much like the other games this season.

The football team hopes to bounce back next season from the tough one they had this year. The trophy for the well known "Charity Bowl," which is what organizers call the Kutztown vs. Fleetwood game because all the profits go to local charity, is now at Kutztown Area High School. That just gives the football team of next year a chance to avenge their loss and get the trophy.

Many of the seniors who played this year will obviously be gone next year, which will only make the season harder. With a senior quarterback and running back, it will be very tough to maintain the offense the team has now.

The football team has over ten seniors, and they are a huge part of the group. This summer, there will be a fight for the starting jobs, hoping to make an improvement for the next season.

FAHS FBLA is Still Recruiting

School

Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) are still looking for new members! In this club, students and teachers work together to further their knowledge on business leadership.

In this club, students can participate in numerous activities. Activities include meeting business leaders, viewing and completing presentations, undertaking field trips, participating in traveling, and earning recognition for your skills.

If you join FBLA, you certainly wouldn't be alone! Nationwide, there are 235,111 FBLA members. There are 13,000 members statewide. There are one hundred and seven members in Fleetwood.

If you are still wondering why you should join, scholarships could be acquired by participating in FBLA. Scholarship money can also be attained by actively being involved in FBLA.

"We meet every thursday after school, and the meetings are usually about a half hour to an hour long. We also go to different businesses and conferences," freshman and FBLA member Emma Crissman said.

Even though attending meetings is very important, you do not have to be afraid of not knowing anyone.

"By joining FBLA, it is an easy way to make new friends and learn new skills about business," sophomore and FBLA member Faith Readinger stated. FBLA members recently took a trip to Unique pretzels in Temple. This trip was to learn how a business like Unique Pretzels works. The duration of this trip lasted from 8:30 to 2:30 and was on 15 November.

Members can gain a multitude of skills by joining and participating in FBLA. Business leadership, social skills, and speech skills are just some of the skills that can be acquired by being a member of FBLA.

Meetings are not mandatory, but they are recommended.

FBLA partakes in many national programs. Some of these national programs include competitive events, skills certification testing, and much more.

To join FBLA, one must fill out a form and pay a fee of $20.00.

Girls Soccer Finishes Standout Season

Sports

The girls soccer season came to an end on 15 November. It was an unforgettable and historic season to say the least. The girls played their hearts out and gave the whole Fleetwood Area School District something to be proud of.

The team made it all the way into state semi-finals but had a very upsetting 3-0 loss to Villa Joseph Marie. Even with this loss, the community was still proud of this girls' team. They never gave up on themselves or on their teammates. The girls always pushed each other to do better, and that made them come closer as a team.

Throughout this season, they had some pretty good accomplishments. They had an undefeated regular season and went on to win the county championship. They beat Mifflin, 1-0, with a goal from Alexis Nowotarski with seconds left in the first half. That was the lone goal in the game that gave the girls something to remember. They made a good run through districts and through states as well.

"It was an amazing season, and I'm proud that I was apart of it," junior Kaili Brinker said. "Everybody on this team always did their part, and it made out to be a great season. We won counties, and it was such an amazing feeling. I really never wanted this season to end, but obviously it has to come to an end sometime. I'm really going to miss playing with these seniors. I will never forget this season, but we've got to look forward to next season."

The team is already doing just that. They have a bright future ahead of them, and all of the team and coaches are excited to see how it plays out, even with the loss of five key players.

The seniors were big keys to this season's success, but there are great replacements to fill in the spots for the leaving players.

Davies, Tissera Recognized As Students of the Month

School

The November Students of the Month are Andrew Tissera and Emma Davies.

Andrew Tissera has one sibling and is the son of Teresa Gerstle. Tissera's favorite subject is English, and his future plans include attending college to study business with a core concentration in marketing while working on his career as an actor, model, author, singer, and songwriter.

Tissera is involved with Student Council, Yearbook, Artifact, and Class Government. Some of his hobbies include photography, art, activism, and fashion. One of his biggest role models is Stevie Nicks.

Tissera believes that his academic standing and morals secured his position as a senior SOTM.

Other information about Andrew includes that he is "constantly burdened under the weight of an ongoing existential crisis."

Emma Davies has two siblings and is the daughter of Thomas and Jennifer Davies.

Davies' favorite subject is science, and her future plans include pursuing a career in forensic psychology with degrees in both psychology and political science.

She is involved in Student Council, student government, National Honor Society, orchestra, string ensemble, chorus, vocal Ensemble, theater, and Relay for Life. Some of her hobbies include playing the guitar, playing the piano, reading, and writing.

Davies' biggest role model is her mother because she has raised her to be the person she is today and keeps her afloat when the going gets tough. Her mother has also allowed her to create her own beliefs as well as her own ideals.

Davies credits her sincere dedication helping the high school and community to improve the environment as the reason for being awarded Student -of-the-Month. She says she is deeply passionate about helping people.

Other information about Emma Davies includes that she represented Pennsylvania with thirty other delegates statewide at the National Association of Student Council Conference in Portland, Oregon, this past June.

The 2016 Election Recapped

Political

As the polls closed the evening of 8 November, 2016, America sat, tense, awaiting the results of the 2016 Presidential Election. Republican candidate, Donald Trump, took the country by surprise as his electoral votes exceeded what reports predicted. According to Larry Sabato and the team from the University of Virginia Center for Politics, Trump was only predicted to receive 216 electoral votes, while Democratic candidate, Hillary Clinton, was expected to receive 322 votes. Trump’s message and political platform however, resonated with more voters as he ended the election with 290 electoral votes. Clinton trailed her opponent with a total of 232 electoral votes but “trumped” him in popular votes as she obtained 797,724 more votes than he. America reacted in a powerful manner to the results. Republicans rejoiced as some Democrats were quick to protest.

During his victory speech, Trump conveyed the importance of unity within the country, he stated, “Now it’s time for America to bind the wounds of division. To all Republicans and Democrats and Independents across this nation, it is time for us to come together as one united people.” Trump expressed his interest in creating jobs, fixing infrastructure and honoring veterans.

In her concession speech, Clinton, stated that the loss was indeed painful, but comforted her disappointed party by reminding them about her platform. “It was about building an America that is hopeful, inclusive and big hearted,” Clinton said. Clinton pushes her supporters to give Trump the opportunity to perform in office.

She also emphasized the smooth transition of power and the idea that unity is what America needs.

President Obama stated in his speech on Trump’s win, that although the election may not have gone in favor of everyone, time continues and the American people must move on. He also stated that his views are significantly different than Trump’s, but reassured the American people that this transition would be smooth.

Exchange Student Visits Fleetwood From Spain

School

Farnes Silveria Rodriguez is a sixteen-year-old foreign exchange student attending Fleetwood Area High School for the 2016-17 school year. Farnes will be joining the Fleetwood class of 2018 for her eleventh grade year through Rotary Exchange.

Farnes was born in Boston, Massachusetts, though she has lived in Barcelona, Spain, for the past fourteen years of her life. Having been born in The United States of America, this exchange program is a unique opportunity for Farnes.

She began her interest in the foreign exchange program three years ago and decided to study abroad in the United States in order to learn about where she came from firsthand.

Upon her arrival at Fleetwood, Farnes took advantage of the many new opportunities in front of her. She currently participates in cheerleading, Student Council, Film Club, Future Business Leaders of America, and German Club, among other activities.

Farnes also has plans to join the Fleetwood Track and Field team and hopes to continue experiencing as many new activities as she can in the short amount of time she will be studying in the United States.

Participating in school-run activities is new to Rodriguez because, in Spain, all extracurriculars are run through the community rather than through the school system.

Being able to actively partake in sports and clubs has been a desire of Farnes’s since her arrival in the United States.

Her only sense of culture shock thus far has been the amount of involvement American students have in their schools.
