Fleetwood Football Starts Strong

School

The Fleetwood Tigers' football team has turned its program around. They have improved offensively and defensively, all with the help of a new offensive game plan and some new players.

With losing seasons since 2014, the Fleetwood Tigers now have a chance of having a very successful year. The team has had a strong start to their season and hope to continue their success throughout the year.

The Tigers have only won a total of four games in the past three seasons. Currently, the team has a record of 6-1 for the first time in the program's 19-year history.

The Maddocks brothers, Charlie, Owen, Tanner, and Lincoln, seemed to have made an impact on the team, as they were expected to.

The coaching staff changed the offense from a Wing-T in favor of a Spread in order to benefit the new quarterback and receivers.

The Tigers have been dominating on both sides of the ball with 12 takeaways this season and have had a current total of 2,911 yards.

After struggling last season going 2-8, the Tigers are focused on taking one game at a time.

Coming into the season, players could tell something was different from the previous years.

"We have a lot more depth," senior lineman Alan Snyder said.

They are a more complete team now, with many returning players helping maintain the chemistry throughout the season. The Tigers' seniors are looking at this season as their last push. All of their hard work throughout the years has come down to this year, as it is their last high school season.

The team is hoping to maintain the current momentum and keep playing at a high level.

Ms. Moll Invites You to Join German Club

School

The German Club, led by Frau Christine Moll at the Fleetwood Area High School, gives students the ability to experience a fun side of German language and culture without academic expectations.

The club is one of many clubs provided by the Fleetwood Area School District in which students in grades six through twelve are free to participate. Most members are devoted to not only learning a different language but also the awareness of different customs.

Frau Christine Moll is the club leader and also teaches exploratory German, German I, German II, and German III at the high school and middle school. During club hours, she makes sure to focus on cultural competence and understanding, and she accomplishes this by introducing students to German customs.

Each club meeting has a theme.

"Generally, there is a seasonally appropriate food-related aspect so that there is a tangible product of German culture that students can enjoy. For example, in December, we create gingerbread houses in the German tradition. Students build them, photograph them, and eat them," Moll said.

The students will soon be traveling to the Reading Liederkrantz to participate in Oktoberfest. A later trip will go to Deutsch Eck, where members will eat German cuisine.

"The German Club Oktoberfest is a celebration of food and whimsy in honor of the real Oktoberfest in Munich, which is from September 21 to October 6 this year," Moll said. "We will eat German food, watch videos of Oktoberfest games, and watch livestreams from the fairgrounds."

Deutsch Eck serves authentic Pennsylvania German food, and this will be the sixth year that the club is going.

If you enjoy German food or dancing, and are open to learning new things, Frau Christine Moll highly encourages you to join German club.

Field of Screams 2019 Scares Again

Recreation

The Field of Screams owner Jim Schopf invites student press out for an all-expense paid evening to his attractions. Attendees received four VIP passes, access to an open-air VIP lounge, a buffet, and the ability to skip all lines. Fleetwood students senior Kyler Tregear, senior Jamin Valick, and his younger brother Jaiden Valick attended this year's Field of Screams press event with Tiger Times reporter, Aaron Poper.

The consensus was overwhelmingly positive.

"Typically, I'm not one to be easily scared, but at times I was genuinely terrified. The actors were great at playing their part and staying in character. The props and costumes were awesome. I was always on my feet trying to prepare myself for the next scare," Jamin Valick said.

Field of Screams' four attractions are called Den of Darkness, Nightmare Asylum, Nocturnal Wasteland, and Haunted Hayride. When attending, keep in mind that participants are subject to physical contact with the actors.

"The actors were very physical. One even gave me a massage! I offered a tip, but he was unwilling to accept," Jamin Valick said.

"My previous experiences of haunted attractions were frightening, but the key thing that made the Field of Screams so much scarier was they could touch you. The actors would jump out and grab you, scaring the heck out of you. The one thing I thought was the scariest was the people with chainsaws. They would come at you with a real chainsaw with the teeth taken out and run it across your leg, making it feel like it was real," Jaiden Valick said.

Everyone's favorite attraction was the Haunted Hayride.

"My favorite attraction was the haunted hayride because of how many different themes were prevalent, and the actors could climb up and get in your face," Tregear said.

"My favorite attraction was the haunted hayride. The feeling of being stuck on the ride and not having the freedom to move around really added to the terror. The feeling of anticipation at each stop kept the attraction interesting the entire ride," Jamin Valick said.

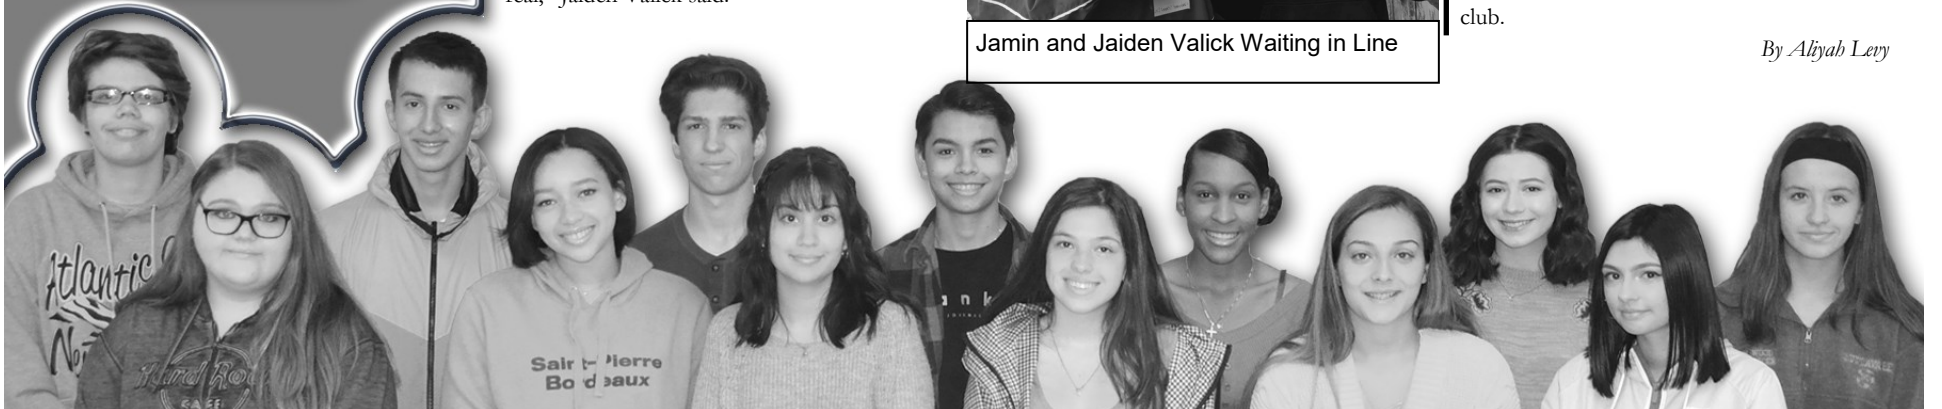

What makes Field of Screams different from all other Halloween attractions was the emphasis on detail and props. Every bit, including the floors and ceilings, was made specifically for each individual room through which participants walked. Nothing felt as if it was copied and pasted or generic.

If going through Halloween attractions and getting scared out of your mind sounds like something of a good time, Field of Screams is a place worthy to be checked out.

Fleetwood Area High School Homecoming Offers a Wide Range of Events to Show School Spirit

School

What's a better way to spend a week-end than to join Fleetwood Area High School in various fun events to show school spirit?

Homecoming at Fleetwood Area High School is a fun and creative way to bring the student body together. There are many activities for students during the school day as well as after. During the school day, students have the chance to play in the annual powderpuff football game.

That same day, Fleetwood hosts a parade to show school pride. The next day is the football team's homecoming game.

Many students enjoy this time of year, but other people believe that the students that attend BCTC are not involved as much as those who do not. Most students do not know, but the teachers and students are the ones who decide who is on the homecoming court.

"Homecoming is a good way to bring together the school, but I think there should be more inclusion with the BCTC kids," history teacher Mr. Todd Weiss said.

"[Student Council] finds out who is on the homecoming court by holding a meeting and counting the votes," economics teacher Mrs. Dina Heffner said.

Most students have varying opinions on what is the best part of homecoming.

"The bonfire is the best," senior Alexa Brady said.

"I think if, I had to pick, I would say the football game on Saturday night would have to be my favorite part of homecoming," senior Jassen Alexis said. "It brings the student body together and involves everyone."

The point of homecoming is to have fun but be safe at the same time.

"It is a great way to get everyone in the school involved, and it is also a fun time," senior Dan Arsmie said.

Fleetwood hopes to see many students at homecoming showing their school pride.

Record Number of Students Participating in Internships

School

The tides of Fleetwood Area High School are changing after a record-breaking number of students are participating in internships.

Senior Daniel Arisme loves to talk about the ins and outs of his internship experience. He has an internship at a physical therapy ward. Arisme has to do seven-and-a-half hours of work a week. Those seven hours may consist of "providing hot and cold packs and helping people with their exercises," Arisme said.

Physical therapy has always been an option for him.

"I've always been looking into physical therapy because of my background in weightlifting and conventional stretching," Arisme said.

Last spring, Dan was weighing his options for next year and years beyond.

"I was lucky enough to have Mr. Engelhardt reach out to me to make me aware of this internship opportunity," Arisme said.

Almost a month into the school year, Arisme sees the true value of the internship.

"It provides you with real-world work experience while also helping you decide what you want to do after high school," Arisme said.

The biggest advantage of the internship program is "further narrowing down options for college." A month into the program, Arisme can really start to evaluate his skills on the job.

"The biggest weakness of mine has always been multitasking and working under pressure," Arisme said.

When the facility is busy, Dan has to turn those weaknesses into strengths to help every patient. The internship program really is tailored for the future by eliminating options or solidifying options, whether it be a college major or a job. This program is essential for people who are undecided about their future.

This shows through the record number of students joining the program this year.

Freshmen Take Annual Field Trip To Gettysburg

School

The Battle of Gettysburg, also known as the "turning point" of the Civil War, is where thousands of people gave their lives for their nation and their cause.

On 4 October, the freshmen of Fleetwood Area High School were given the opportunity to see for themselves the history of Gettysburg. The field trip was all day, starting at 6:30 a.m. and ending at 5:00 p.m.

Chaperones for this trip included teachers Ms. Sue Nagle, Mr. Edward Carr, Mr. Todd Weiss, and Ms. Laura Treichler. While at Gettysburg, students toured the battlefield and visited infamous areas, such as Little Round Top and Devil's Den, as well as the local museum.

"I hope students are better able to understand and appreciate the sacrifices that were made on this day. From both Union and Confederate soldiers," Weiss said.

However, the point of this trip is not solely for educational purposes; Treichler believes there is a moral lesson that can be learned here as well.

"Soldiers in the Civil War were mostly your age. I hope that you [students] realize how lucky you are today compared to what it was like back then," Treichler said.

Often times, Nagle believes that areas of this trip are overlooked. Her advice to students attending would be to take their time and appreciate the history that is surrounding them.

"There is always something new to learn there. Whether it be anecdotes or facts about what happened after the war, these people's jobs are working here, and they have an incredible wealth of knowledge to share," Carr said.

Carr views the Civil War as one of the most important moments in history and sees this trip as a unique experience.

"Unfortunately, we cannot do this for every history lesson. Being so close to Gettysburg and knowing what happened, it would almost be silly not to go," Carr said.

The field trip was a memorable moment for all those who chose to attend.

"The field trip gave me the opportunity to better connect with the lesson, but also with my fellow students. It was something that I was lucky to be a part of," sophomore Abigail Lutcavage said.

While it is important to learn about Gettysburg, history as a whole is also an essential element in today's school curriculum.

"Through history, we learn more about ourselves, about society, and why we are the way we are today," Carr said.

Without history, it would be impossible to understand why and how things work the way they do. History is cyclical. If we can learn from past mistakes, maybe we can better manage our future," Treichler said.

Pewdiepie Involved in Another Scandal

Entertainment

Youtube’s largest star, Pewdiepie, is caught up in yet another scandal.

Felix Kjellberg, publicly known as Pewdiepie, announced he was going to donate $50,000 to the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) in his celebratory video for surpassing 100 million subscribers. Fans quickly took to the comments of the video, as well as Twitter, to express their feelings about ADL and Pewdiepie’s donation towards the group. Felix made a separate video explaining why he decided to pull the donation.

“I made the mistake of picking a charity I was advised instead of picking a charity that I’m personally passionate about,” Kjellberg said in the video.

Pewdiepie is no stranger to controversies. In 2017, he paid two men to hold up an anti-semitic sign. That same year, he was caught using racial slurs in a live stream. He saw the donation to ADL as a “opportunity to put an end to these alt-right claims” against him.

The ADL has spoken outright against Pewdiepie, which is why many fans thought it was strange for him to be donating to the organization.

“Why would you give $50,000 to a company that has talked about you in a negative way?” Fleetwood junior Mason Reimert said. “With (Pewdiepie’s) personality, he basically does and says exactly what he wants. So when he wanted to pull the donation, he probably didn’t even think twice. I think maybe fans made him aware of certain aspects of ADL.”

Connor Ammon, a Pewdiepie fan and sophomore at FAHS, supported his fanbase.

“He is a genuine good person; he made a mistake and admitted to it,” Ammon said.

Pewdiepie still plans to donate the money to charity but has yet to decide which one. He plans to take his time with this donation and said he wants to do it properly.

Mental Illness Is More Common Than You Think

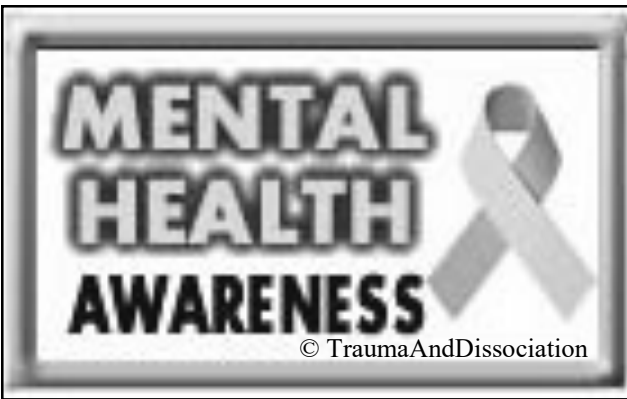

Health/Medicine

“Mental health problems are common, but help is available,” MentalHealth.gov write.

With increasing knowledge about mental health issues, there is also an increase of different stereotypes surrounding people with mental illnesses. Many people who deal with a mental illness can sometimes feel that there is no one to talk to, yet many people are willing to help those in need.

In 1990, Congress officially recognized the first week in October as Mental Illness Awareness Week. This helped to destigmatize mental health and encouraged people to look for help. This week is meant to change the way people see mental health and the many biases that come with having a mental illness.

Mental health is something that many people live with. Even if a person does not think he or she can help someone who has a mental illness, sometimes just being there is enough for the person.

Someone might not think that mental health can affect one’s life, but it is more common than many know it to be. Around 4.5% of all adults have some form of mental illness. Around 20% of children will experience some type of mental illness in their lives.

Even if someone doesn’t think he or she knows someone who has a mental illness, that person might not want to share because they fear the criticism they could receive for being labeled. If you know someone who has a mental illness, don’t be afraid to reach out and talk to them; it might just make their day knowing that someone understands them.

His brother, Adam, is Fleetwood’s assistant Cross Country coach, and his brother, Ryan, served in the Navy and is becoming an officer for the National Guard. After finishing his senior year, Aaron doubts he will go to college. Going to college does not appeal to him because of the outrageous cost and how students graduate feeling that the world is owed to them. Instead, Aaron is looking to attend a trade school to get an associate’s degree in Criminal Justice and go through the Police Academy. For fun, Aaron spends five or more hours per day listening to independent political commentators and talk radio shows. He strongly recommends listening to multiple shows and viewpoints. “I’m a Daily Wire subscriber. I love listening to Ben Shapiro and Michael Knowles for conservative politics. When it comes to liberal politics, I really enjoy Tim Pool. He rationalizes a lot of my opinions,” Poper said. Aaron does not care for journalism. He is a part of The Tiger Times this year because he has to have Mr. Houpp as a teacher for his senior year and third consecutive year in a row. “Yeah, Mr. Houpp is pretty cool,” Poper said. Aaron had Mr. Houpp for English during his sophomore year and was a reporter for his junior year. Poper looks forward to being one of the few that actually writes about Fleetwood, and not events from faraway places.
